Examination has the same meaning as in the Assessment Policy and Procedures (refer above).

Academic Misconduct is a breach of Academic Integrity principles as defined in this Academic Integrity Policy and Procedures. Academic Misconduct includes acts, omissions by which a student gains or attempts to gain in unfair or unjustified academic advantage. There are many types of Academic Misconduct including research misconduct, cheating, contract cheating, plagiarism, self-plagiarism and recycling of work, collusion, deception, impersonation, fabrication, obstruction or sabotage.

Research Misconduct is a breach of Research Integrity Principles as defined in this Academic Integrity Policy and Procedures. Research Misconduct includes acts, omissions by which an Academic Staff Member gains or attempts to gain in unfair or unjustified academic advantage in their scholarly and research pursuits. There are many types of Research Misconduct including plagiarism, fabrication, obstruction or sabotage, failing to present research methodology, findings data accurately or transparently.

Cheating is a broad term which encompasses a range of actions which constitute academic misconduct including fraud, dishonesty or deceit of any kind in relation to an assessment item in order to gain an academic advantage. Examples include, but are not limited to, making a false claim of contribution to a group assignment, completing an assessment for another person without their knowledge or consent, engaging another person to assist in the completion of an assessment or to complete an assessment on one’s behalf, bringing material or device into an examination or other forms of assessment other than the approved items specified for that assessment task. Using artificial intelligence writing tools such as content generators, assistant writers, re-writers and authoring tools or software to auto generate or paraphrase work or proofreading services which rewrite a student’s work to an extent that it is not their own and without acknowledgement is also a form of cheating. Uploading one’s own work or Kent assessment materials and downloading other students work or assessment materials through a third-party platform is also a form of cheating.

Contract Cheating is a type of cheating where a student arranges, attempts to arrange, acquires or allows any form of paid or unpaid assessment to be undertaken fully or partially by another party and the student represents or represented the work as if it were their own. This is sometimes referred to as “Ghost Writing”.

Use of commercial academic cheating services which offer to produce work on a student’s behalf are not only unethical and contradictory to Kent’s Academic Integrity Policy but also illegal.

Use of artificial intelligence writing tools such as content generators, assistant writers, re-writers and authoring tools or software to auto generate work as well as proofreading services which rewrite a student’s work to the extent that it is not their own but is presented as their own work (i.e. not acknowledged) or not permitted in the context of an assessment is also a form of contract cheating. Purchasing or downloading other students’ work or assessment materials through a third-party platform and presenting it as one’s own is also a form of contract cheating.

Collusion: Collusion is unauthorised collaboration with other students to complete an assessment task or examination. It may involve sharing ones work with others to help them with an assessment task, communicating during an examination, leaving an examination or test answers to the view of other students so they can copy answers, arranging to copy answers in an examination from another student with their consent, or sharing exam questions or papers when not authorised to do so, passing notes in examination or using technology to engage with others to gain an unfair advantage through file sharing; for example, file sharing where exam questions and assignments are exchanged internally. Uploading one’s own work or Kent assessment materials and downloading other students work or assessment materials through a platform in collaboration with other students is also a form of collusion.

Falsification: Providing forged or falsified medical or other documents to gain an academic advantage.

Fabrication: The creation or making of false data, information, research or citations as part of an assessment.

Impersonation: Assuming another person’s identity and taking an examination or test or other form of assessment which requires attendance in person or electronically on their behalf or arranging for another person to assume ones identity and complete an assessment on one’s behalf.

Obstruction and Sabotage: The act of preventing, impeding or interfering with other student’s learning opportunities in order to gain an academic advantage or attempting to do so. This may include for example, tampering with practical examination apparatus to ensure other students attain incorrect answers, intentionally providing incorrect information to a student, destroying another student’s work or limiting access to materials to prevent them from completing an assessment or examination.

Plagiarism: The presentation of work or ideas of others as one’s own without due acknowledgement and referencing. Examples include, but are not limited to, the inclusion of one or more sentences from another person’s work, or tables, graphs, images, designs, computer programs, computer code or formulae and any other data, ideas or work without the use of quotation marks and acknowledgement of the source; the use of one or more sentences from the work of another person where a few words have been changed or where the order of copied phrases or sentences has been changed; the use of one or more lines of computer program from the work of another person where the name of variables or functions or methods have been changed or where the order of the functions or methods has been changed.
Self-plagiarism: A type of plagiarism where a person re-uses their own work in whole or part, that has previously been submitted, marked and counted towards the fulfilment of the requirement of another unit, or the present unit, or a previous offering of the present unit without the permission to do so from an Academic Staff member and without due acknowledgement and reference.

1.0 Staff and Student Codes of Conduct and Academic and Research Integrity Responsibilities

Kent students are expected to abide by the Student Charter and Code of Conduct as contained in the Student Handbook. Notably, Kent is committed to the principles of intellectual freedom, including critical and open inquiry, and the free expression of ideas and opinion without fear or favour. As members of a community of scholars, Kent students are encouraged to develop a capacity for critical judgment and sustained and independent search for truth and with this come responsibilities of maintaining values of honesty, responsibility and fairness and enacting of educational values in academic undertakings which underpin academic integrity.

Kent staff are expected to abide by the Staff Code of Conduct as contained in the Staff Handbook, and, notably, academic staff are required to abide by the Code of Ethical Academic Conduct which included adhering to principles of academic honesty and integrity. Academic Freedom and Intellectual Inquiry are also provisioned in the Staff Handbook but with it comes the responsibility to be bound by high academic standards, including a commitment to intellectual honesty and upholding of academic integrity principles in any scholarly and research undertakings.

Responsibility for the upholding of Academic Integrity hence lies with all Kent stakeholders and Kent encourages Academic and Professional staff and students to collaborate and openly communicate and collaborate on aspects of Academic Principles to fulfil this responsibility.

2.0 Procedures

2.1 Education and Awareness

Kent’s primary focus is on raising awareness of Academic Integrity, and educating and guiding both staff and students on the principles and values Academic Integrity entails.

2.1.1 Student Education

Kent provides education and guidance to students on Academic Integrity, writing and referencing conventions of academic work.

Students will be made aware of academic integrity principles, acceptable academic practices and unacceptable practices which constitute academic misconduct. This information will be available to them via:

- Orientation Program presentations
- Academic Learning Support Workshops
- Unit Outlines
- Kent website
- Academic staff communications and directives at the beginning of each trimester or block of study.
- Mid trimester academic integrity quiz

2.2.1.1 Acceptable Academic Practices

Acceptable academic practices that are encouraged by Kent include:
i. Self and Peer-assisted Proofreading and Editing of work to correct grammar, punctuation and make corrections, where the corrections are made by the student based on feedback provided and not by the proof-reader or other service.

ii. Recognition and Acknowledgement of External Sources and authorship, the ideas and contributions of other parties using an appropriate referencing style, including referencing of the use of any Artificial Intelligence Tools.

iii. Collaboration with others where this is explicitly permitted in an assessment task, and following assessment guidelines and with due acknowledgement of the contribution of other parties or the extent of one’s own contribution to the task. This may be acceptable for example in a group work assessment task, where an assignment requires or permits students to work with others; but would not be acceptable if the assessment task is an individual task which explicitly requires students to work on their own.

2.1.2 Staff Education

Kent’s Scholarly Activity and Professional Practice Framework supports Academic Staff Members undertake scholarly and research activities and the Executive Dean oversees, supports and guides scholarly activities Teaching through its Scholarly and Research undertakings.

Education about Research Integrity is a critical component of the guidance in their scholarly pursuits and Academic Staff Professional Development Activities scheduled by Kent, Scholarly Activity Colloquiums, Professional Development and Review Processes and other Academic Forums will seek to ensure that all academic staff, notably those in their early careers as academics, are aware of the Principles of Research Integrity, as well as broader principles of Academic Integrity in their applications to both staff and students.

Kent’s ultimate goal in educating staff is to ensure that honesty, trust, responsibility, and fairness form the foundations of academic scholarship and scholarly activities at Kent and that Academic staff can effectively fulfil their stewardship responsibilities in guiding students in their academic journey. Notably staff will be made aware of their responsibilities to:

- Undertake education and training in research integrity;
- Record and present methodology, data and research findings accurately;
- Declare any conflict of interests;
- Publish findings and research output honestly and accurately;
- Treat other researchers fairly and provide acknowledgement of the contributions of others accurately and according to established conventions;
- Ensure that research complies with relevant legislation, policies and guidelines;
- Provide fair and accurate feedback as part of any peer reviews they partake in;
- Seek advice from the Executive Dean on academic and research integrity as required; and
- Report suspected breaches of Academic and Research Integrity at Kent in accordance with this Policy.

All Kent Higher Education Academic Staff, and notably those with responsibilities for assessment, investigation or decision making regarding alleged academic misconduct or the design or administration of student misconduct policies will receive training in contract cheating detection and deterrence as part of their Orientation at Kent via TEQSA’s self-directed online course, Masterclass: contract cheating detection and deterrence.

Kent staff engaging in research activities will also be made aware that they are bound by and must adhere to the Australian Code for the Responsible Conduct of Research 2018 (“the 2018 Code” or “ACRCR”), which is applicable to all research disciplines, and which guides institutions and researchers in responsible research practices.

In addition, staff working with human data will be made aware of applicable ethics principles as specified in the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research (2018) as defined in Kent’s Ethics Approval for Negligible or Low Risk Research Guidelines.

2.2 Mitigation Strategies

2.2.1 Prevention of Student Breaches of Academic Integrity

Upholding of Academic Integrity Principles and therefore prevention of Academic Misconduct through the mitigation of risk associated to Academic and Research Integrity is the primary focus for Kent.

Kent teaching staff are required to:

a. inform students of the requirement for academic integrity during their studies at Kent and of the consequences of academic misconduct, and
b. communicate risks associated with using commercial academic cheating services clearly and regularly to students as part of ongoing discussions about academic integrity and the potential for class groups on messaging and social media platforms to be infiltrated by contract cheating services.
c. make students aware how to report an instance where they are approached or blackmailed by contract cheating services
d. make students aware of how to access genuine study support services
e. implement mitigation strategies in assessment tasks and approaches.

Kent teaching staff are instructed to undertake the following activities to inform students:

- Discuss academic integrity in class, make students aware of the definitions, levels and penalties;
- Make sure students know that they are aware, in particular, of contract cheating. Many students assume that their lecturers/tutors/trainers are not aware of such issues;
- Provide clear instruction regarding the parameters for use of generative and other Artificial Intelligence Tools within the unit and assessment tasks.
- Ensure students are aware of and have access to referencing guidelines, including for use of AI Tools.
- Refer students to the Academic Learning Support (ALS) staff as required;
- Read the Unit Outline and assessment guidelines from the perspective of the student and check with students if they require clarification about ambiguities in these documents or lack sufficient instructions;
- Be sensitive to the pressure and stresses students are under and to reassure them by providing the information they need to succeed.
• To provide assessment information and feedback on evaluated works in a timely fashion;
• Inform students that they should contact their lecturers/tutors/trainers with any concerns about breaches of academic integrity; and
• Create opportunities for dialogue about plagiarism and for students to raise questions about their understanding and application of academic writing.

Kent teaching staff implement mitigation strategies in assessment tasks and approaches to minimise the likelihood of academic misconduct occurring through the following:

i. If a quiz or online assessment contributes significantly to the assessment mark for the unit of study, the Unit Co-ordinator (HEd) must take appropriate steps to assure its academic integrity and it is consistent with the Kent policies and procedures.

ii. If a quiz or online assessment contributes a small percentage of the overall unit mark, academic integrity should still be considered as part of its design but assurance of the overall academic integrity of assessment for the unit of study may be through consideration of the complete assessment approach for the unit.

iii. If class tests or final examinations contribute to the assessment mark, the Exam Invigilator (Lecturer/Trainer) must take active measures to provide seating arrangements which prevent copying. Where it is not possible to ensure students cannot see another student’s paper one of the following techniques should be used:
• sorted seating where students are sitting with adjacent students taking different examinations;
• scrambling multiple choice questions between candidates; or
• other appropriate methods

iv. Where there is a possibility that ghost-writing or contract cheating might occur, the lecturer/trainer must take reasonable steps to eliminate or minimise the opportunity to do so, so that assessors can be reasonably satisfied that the submitted work was written by the student without assistance except for legitimate co-operation. Such measures may include, but are not limited to:
• requiring an oral presentation of the work as part of the assessment;
• assessing outlines, drafts, and other iterations of the written work as it is developed;
• requiring that students demonstrate learning outcomes in a supervised examination, where the student is required to pass, or reach a reasonable threshold in, the examination in order to pass the unit of study;
• conducting an oral examination.

v. Provision of clear assessment instructions and guidelines which indicate whether and how tools such as Artificial Intelligence may be used or are expected to be used by students.

vi. Where there is a possibility that students use Artificial Intelligence Tools or Generative AI Technologies in particular to complete an assessment, the lecturer/trainer must take reasonable steps to ensure that assessment design is robust enough to produce evidence that is valid, reliable, sufficient, current and authentic to enable the assessor to make a judgement as to whether relevant learning outcomes have been achieved by the student. Where this is not the case, the lecturer/trainer will refer the matter to the Course Co-ordinator and the relevant Associate Dean(s).

In addition, Kent IT and Facilities Unit ensure that:
i. Students and staff are regularly reminded of their obligation to not disclose university system passwords to anyone, and that genuine, ethical businesses will not request this information.

ii. IT systems are monitored for suspicious activity, and spam filters and other tools are updated to quarantine emails to students that advertise illegal cheating services

iii. Material posted or left on campus promoting commercial academic cheating services are promptly removed

Any information or evidence relating to a commercial academic cheating service targeting Kent or used by Kent students will be is shared with regulators by the Chief Risk and Compliance Officer.

2.2.2 Prevention of Academic Staff Breaches of Research Integrity

Kent academic staff are guided in their scholarly and research practices by the Executive Dean as part of Kent's Professional Development Policies and Procedures and Scholarly Activity and Professional Practice Framework activities.

Collaboration, collegiality, transparency and Peer Reviews will be encouraged and promotes within Kent's Academic Community and through these processes, Kent will ensure that collective ownership of responsibility for Research Integrity is exercised and Research Misconduct avoided.

Furthermore, to mitigate breaches, Kent Academic Staff engaged in research will be encouraged to:

   a. Submit ethical clearance applications to the Executive Dean and Academic Board where they seek to work with human data.
   b. Discuss their research and other scholarly undertakings with the Executive Dean prior to commencing such activities to ensure that methodologies suitable to the research goals are implemented and research results justified.
   c. Make their research engagements and collaborations known to Kent so that oversight can be maintained over undertakings of Academic Staff and the relevant of scholarly and research undertakings assessed against the staff member’s role at Kent and discipline of expertise as well as to recognise and appropriately support collaborative research undertakings among Kent Academic Staff Members and Kent affiliated research.
   d. Ensure staff are recognised as authors only where they have made a significant contribution to the research output in question and all contributors are appropriately acknowledged.

5.0 Copyright

Copyright is a part of Intellectual Property and hence should also be considered within the scope of the principles of Academic Integrity with particular reference to the use and acknowledgement of sources of information.

All Kent staff and students are required to comply with the Copyright Act 1968 (Cth) and the Copyright Amendment (Digital Agenda) Act 2000 by, for example, not photocopying more than 10% or one chapter (whichever is greater) of a book.
The Copyright Act 1968 (Cth) provides the legislative framework for the creation, copying, and communication of electronic, print, graphic, and audio-visual works. Staff are expected to comply with all laws relating to copyright.

The Copyright Act 1968 gives authors and other copyright owners of original 'works' the exclusive right to reproduce, publish, communicate, and adapt their material; and to licence, transfer, or sell it to other people.

Almost all written material, images, as well as music and other sound recordings, films and other visual media, are considered as 'works' protected by copyright, whether they are in print format or digital, in a book, a magazine, a DVD, or on a website. Using copyright protected works without permission from the copyright owner, or according to the provisions of the Copyright Act 1968, could lead to infringement of the Act, with possibly severe repercussions for both the individual and Kent.
